

ENTREPRENEURS THAT ARE CHANGING THE WORLD

THE MOST INNOVATIVE AND
INSPIRING BUSINESS MINDS
WORKING TODAY

EVAN SPIEGEL SNAPCHAT

HOW HE IS CHANGING THE WORLD:

The youngest self-made billionaire in the world, 26-year-old Evan Spiegel founded Snapchat shortly before dropping out of Stanford in 2012, and the rest is history. If imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, then Spiegel should feel extremely flattered. In the past year, Facebook (whom Spiegel famously turned down a $4 billion offer from) and Instagram have shamelessly aped all of Snapchat's core features. One thing they can't copy? The cool quotient. Snapchat remains the go-to app for millennials and teens who reject the manufactured, like-based infrastructure of its competition. And Spiegel? He seems focused on constant innovation and a foundation quietly-created in February that aims to support "arts, education, and youth [services] over the course of the next 15 to 20 years."

Photography by Andrew Eccles

NOËLLA COURSARIS MUSUNKA MALAIKA

HOW SHE IS CHANGING THE WORLD:

A model who has appeared in Vogue, Elle, and Vanity Fair, Musunka turned to philanthropy as a means to give back to her native country, The Democratic Republic of Congo. Through her grassroots nonprofit organization Malaika, Musunka works tirelessly to empower Congolese girls and their communities through comprehensive and completely free education and health programs. Musunka founded the organization in 2007, and today her projects impact the lives of tens of thousands of people. Frequently appearing alongside President Clinton at Clinton Global Initiative panels, the passion and devotion Musunka has demonstrated in her global fight have made her one of the most sought-after speakers in the world on the subjects of women's education and human rights.

Photography by Jem Mitchell

